To the whole Kingdom of ENGLAND, SCOT- LAND and IRELAND.

IN a most distracted season, as unto the humours and fancies of men, and expectation of the times, doth Anglicus appear: it's observed, he never becomes publike, but at what time emergent occasions and eminent State-actions or Consultations are upon the Theater of the English Common-wealth, and at what time mens minds are greatly impregnated in expectation of some grand Catastrophe, as even now they are. A little before the publishing of his Starry Messenger 1645. mens minds did droop exceedingly, Cardinals being more fit at that time then Purgers for Leicester was lost, his Majesty in the head of a considerable Army, our Army wandring with uncertain hopes, the Londoners were amazed, and I beleieve the Parlia. dubious of future successe: the very day of Knaishby fight Anglicus peeps out with his Starry Messenger, promises better things, viz. the regaining of Leicester, and the fatal rout of all our enemies, their flight into the west, Cornwall, &c. yea of scurvilous Wharton and his galloping Knapsack, wherein some say that silly Prophecie of so glorious a March was pickled up: the most honourable Sir Tho. Fairfax and his unconquered Army (guided by God) obtained this victory: In Octob. 1646. the whole Kingdome were amused, doubting the integrity of the Scottish Army, and the fidelity of that Nation, Anglicus he in words at length, and not ambiguously, speaks in the affirmative for the honour of that Nation: Speak & write what thou canst (most absurdest of men Noworth) have not that Nation, to their everlasting honour, verified my predictions, and deluded thy malicious scandals imposed upon their Souldiery? they returned according to Covenant, seasonably delivered us our Towns and Arms, what could they do more? In the beginning of May 1647. Anglicus sets forth the Worlds Catastrophe, and his judgment Astrologicall upon the three Suns seen in Shropshire, admonishing the Kingdome of what immediately did appear, and what must succeed for almost two yeers: to the Book it self he refers the Reader, wherein there is involved many high and great mysteries concerning the very times: In that Catastrophe he appears most confidently for the integrity of the present Army; let the veriest Viper of all his enemies contradict, if they can, any thing he saith in behalfe of the Army, &c. But Master Anglicus, what shall we of us now? If people generally repine and murmur, the Army my is unsatisfied, the Citizens melancholly, the Clergy consulting no purpose, his Majesty invironed with armed Troopers, the Wharton swear it: Others, and they no little fools, say, That intentions of the Parliament and Army run invisibly into a ty, and at last will jump in one and the self same Center, both tending one and the same thing; so say I: and that a few will produce a strange and admirable Catastrophe, very unex pected to many, now lull'd asleep: Many say his Majesty will propose Propositions when presented; others say the contrary: I say if he signe them, he is Mortalium prudentissimus. God direct his and guide ours, and instruct us all in our severall enterprizes, to dertake those acts which may prove for the peace of the Kingdom Amen. Many expect a present Thunder to break forth amidst us, is in plain terms, they would have us cut one anothers throats, divide to undoe us, and then smile at our folly and plunder the But it shall appear to our malicious enemies, neither the Army are such asses, as having beaten all that resisted, now in conclusion to bumbast our selves, viz. Souldier against Souldier, Round-head against Round-head, Citizen against Citizen; oh how the Devil would smile at this, and poor Wharton grin and mump: God bless the City from divisions, and preserve it from fire and treachery. It the least of mens fears the returne of the Scottish Army: Such have no eyes. Ha; I should be sorry that prudent people unim red by Parliament, should againe come amongst us; for if they returne againe voluntary without the Parliaments commission they may come into the Kingdome (it's true) with sound bodies but they shall returne home over Tweed, limping, halting, lame with bruised bodies and empty carriages: but the Nation is more provident and noble, and have yet no invasive design against us.

Again, many stand to this very day Newters, and wish confusion all parties; some would have the Army disband, others that the Parliament might dissolve; some wish London levelled to the ground (these many and no small ones,) others wish his Majesty may reign some desire, neither he or Posterity should rule; some are for Anarchy others for Democracy: Anglicus is yet for Monarchy, as most con sistent to English constitutions. We will leave his Majesties Cause protection and restoring unto God, his person to the care of both Kingdoms and the Army, hoping they will act according to the Command, wherein we of the Commonalty are also engaged. Much cause is the Country-man should repine and grumble, having an hard Landlord, who grinds him to powder; an honest Souldier too upon his Provision, and yet not a farthing of Taxes lessened, during these his unsufferable pressures, of which I hope our State will take timely consideration. Many distrust the Army, of whom I now speak thus much, That the whole Kingdom hath had the benefit of the Souldiers hard Marches, in season and out of season, their numerous and bloody fights, their hungry, weather-beaten and irksome sufferings, their extraordinary and miraculous undertakings and victories; and yet now many repine and think them not worthy their wages, or security for it, but could be content to send them into Utopia or Terra incognita to go seek their Pay; but our Parliament have more care and better thoughts of them. These men have served the Kingdoms service, secured the Citizens persons at home, and their fortunes abroad, and generally in their deportments notwithstanding their extreame poverty have so soberly demeaned themselves, as to this day they are rarely accused of any eminent rage, theft, plunder, or other abusive disorders, subject to a male-contented and necessitous Souldiery. The very Law of nature informs that it is necessary we eat, else we cannot subsist; and what hath every Army had more, or at present do enjoy more then bread and naked bodies and empty purses, yet doe they most willingly allow allowance for their free quartering when we shall pay them their wages. Saturday Aug. 7. 1647. that Paragon of war his Excellency Tho. Fairfax, and most of his valiant Commanders and whole Army marched through the very heart of the City; did any Mercer or Chea slide lose an inch of Taffetie, or any Costermonger a Pippin of the Army? nor hath a Souldier hitherto been quartered in the City; every man therein sits under his owne Vine, and yet is discontented at what he knowes not, whilst the poor Country-man is served to all and every necessity. Yet behold, say some male-contented Citizens, the Army obstructs all. A few words I speak to the Kingdom of England. Backslide not, or become apostata unto this Parliament or their valiant Army; they are Gods Instruments: Providence cannot be deluded, or the Decrees of God lessened. The dissolution of this Parliament, is the resolution of thy very bowels into wars, murders and confusion: the Armies disbanding totally, is assured forerunner of a new and more bloody war: For, being curious in the search of thy welfare, Loc, I beheld a wicked Angel setting a price upon the lives and fortunes of our worthies in Parliament and he importuned audaciously, that all their friends, both Citizens and Souldiers, might together with them be destroyed, slaine eternally perish: But the Angels love no deeds of darknesse; for the designe was contradicted by their Guardian-Angel, and then my were for a time shut: Conformity may, Tumults can never estate his Majesty. Scarcity of Bread approacheth, the Plague wander through many of thy Provinces, but it's beyond my knowledge if the devouring Sword harme thee this year. I was then desirous know something concerning the honourable City of London, whose welfare I so much esteeme, and whose Citizens I doe so cordially respect: for a time I was in much perplexity, for where men love also fear, so did I: slumbering I thought a voyce delivered articu-lantly these words: Oh London be thou passive; many deluding and dividing Angels are emitted and mixed with thy naturall senses, they have assumed power over thee 1033. dayes, 268: of those past, more are not. Hereat I was much astonished, opened my eyes, and behold a very fierce Angel with a sharp sword, mortall and destructive appeared, and hovered over thee; he shook his sword at thee, would have also drawn it; the Saints prevailed, the Angel was rebuked, &c. Amongst the Caelestiall Heroes, no preposterous Councils take place, the day of thy visitation is not so neer: doe thou heale and apply Balsome to thy bitter divisions: by prayer prevent the approaching Plague; thousands of ungodly desire thy ruine: thou art among the number of those designed for slaughter and pillage. But my task. whose envy doe I fear? am not I my selfe a parcell of the publick? if I have not thousands of pounds to lend the State, I have a million of good wishes for their prosperity; I shall have the tears of many, and a sheet to my grave; not an Alderman scarce so much, for the heirs of rich Parents seldome mourn, &c. a present rupture amongst the Commonalty and in the City would be pleasing to many; let fools nourish their ill conceptions, and live upon shadows; the endeavours of many unadvised people are not wanting to continue and help forwards a miserable combustion amongst us: it's affirm-tive in Astrology, that there will not be any such notorious districtions, as to engage the Kingdom in blood, Amen, or the City of Lon-to a fury. Let me not live, if any earthly thing should be more welcome unto me then to live under Monarchy, yea under his Majesty, and I now expresse my self unto the quick, that I desire his Majesty should be restored, (but herein I submit to the decree of the almighty) and leave the manner how it must be done to the wisdom of the two Parliaments of England & Scotland. Again, I now speak the true truth, according to the rules of that art, which hath been recorded with prosperous success, viz. That his Majesty nor friends nor underhand practices or any surmizes of connivance with the army, or any their Officers, can ever advance any designe tending to his restitution, theirs or the Kingdomes good, &c. &c. as oft in factis, &c. Some would have the whole army disband: Friend be not partiall, tell thee, he that contributes a penny to disband it, will lose a pound by the bargain; yet am I no Souldier. Am I not assured, it's for the good of the whole Nation the army stands: art thou well affected, thou shalt need fear no menacing of the contrary party: hast thou been in armes against us, performe thy just payments; be not seditious, thou mayst from hence live securely. Verily to the disaffected English I say, if once again they flye out, then skin for skin. My God! how much do I wish an everlasting oblivion of those two grand nick-names Round-head & Cavalier? we are National Brethren, in the name of God let us live lovingly and forget preceding injuries: after this time Wharton shall write untill dooms-day ere I mention the poor animall. Our unseasonable divisions render us forgetfull of our duties to God: for of what effects can the prayer of an Episcopall Clergy-man be, who prays cordially without doubt that his Maj. may come againe to rule; but the poor man hath a Coloquintida in his devotions, viz. Lord restore his Maj. provided he restore us to our Bishops lands, Deaneries, &c. and our sequestred Benefices? he that is on our side, he prays largely, that peace may be restored, his Maj. re-seated, yet intentionallie he must first be assured to enjoy the Benefice, Office he at present hath, &c. or else he puts in his verdict against his Majesty, and stumbles his friends with intricate contradictions to no purpose. wave self-ends on all hands, and then in the twinkling of an eye his Maj. and Parl. will accord, he enjoying his due Regalitie, we our Native birth-rights. In this work, his Maje. being mortall, must act his part, & every Member of both houses theirs for they are but men; the Souldier, the Citizen, the Presbiter, the Independent must leave all self-ends and follow Christ, and become poor: a hard task. In words we mention self-denying, but in actions we are from self-doing; we prohibit by laws to steal, & yet most men and pilfer from the Common-wealth: let us not suffer the quarrel be world without end, and say also Amen: In fine, I say, we adhere to the Parliament, and not affront them as of late, and the readiest means for cure of our present distempers, and for settling his Maj. But I am wandred almost into a Pulpit, where I never had fancy, I return to my proper sphere, desiring every of this years Anglicus, to give it a favourable censure; it is ed but some will find ten thousand errors therein: let them say they please, write what they can, no man in the world dares his owne poor brats then Anglicus doth, they being produced in great deformity: with generous souls his faultings may be seasonable excuse this year, sith Anglicus was performed when fancy was over-burdened with intricate meditations made of his Introduction. Let God doe his pleasure with me, let them censure my writings, and mine enemies speak large sentences me, the integrity of my owne heart is onely knowne unto God self, wherein for a full satisfaction I say, that the good of the lick first invited my pen to action, without prejudicate opinion Monarchy, Episcopacy or of any particular injury offered me by other; and when I shall return to earth, and must expect to be re-remembered, it shall even at that instant be a cordial to my conscience that I loved Monarchy, took part with the English Parliament gainst oppressions; flattered no man, honoured my own Nation, received Bribe, or was partial, or willingly enforced a judgment trary to Art, but ever retained, mentem sinam in corpore sano.

who desire to know the latitude of D, must have recourse to the Table printed in Anglicus 1646. The latitude of the five other Planets is casually omitted, but happily Master Booker in his Almanack of this year hath monethly put them down, unto which I refer every one. He that would more rightly understand the affairs of the English Common-wealth for this year 1648. let him peruse the Worlds Catastrophe, published by me in May 1647. — In my Introduction, p. 39. line 20. read 44 minutes; so in 21. r. for 24. 44 of xxx. and in p. 31. l. 15.

THE Introduction unto Astrologie, which in my last ANGLICUS I promised to publish, is now come forth & made publike, for the encouragement of all Students. It consists of three parts; the first is merely Introductory, teaching how to erect a Figure, how to understand an Ephemeris, what is the nature of every House, of every Planet, of every Signe; what kind of Men, what Plants, Minerals, Beasts, Fishes; &c. are under the dominion of every Planet, together with the severall descriptions of Men, according to the seven Planets and twelve Signes, &c. The second Book most easily instructeth the Student how to resolve any manner of Question pertinent unto the life or condition of Man; as of Marriages, Preferments, Law suites, Journeys, discovery of Thefts, Sickneses, the cause and Member diseased, of Fugitives, &c. in that Book there are also one or more examples on every House.
The third Book shewes an easie Method for rectifying, directing and judging of a Nativity, the whole Art thereof, with the measure of time in Directions, and judgment upon all manner of Directions, Revolutions, Profections, Transits: there is also inserted a Catalogue of such Authors as have been conferred with for better enabling me in the Work. Lastly, there is a Nativity judged for examples sake, and for benefit of the young Student. The Title of the Introduction is JANUARIES Observations.

W*Idowes and Orphans* send up their Tears and Laments to Heaven, Petitions & Cryes procure money or pittie from men. We are distressed for money, the Commonalty payes most unwillingly; the Souldier cryes out for his Pay: what do our Superiors do this while? O Lord God! how cunningly are the Actions of these days carried? with what fair pretences? what Missives, Messages, Treaties or Letters passe frequently? The Kingdom expects a good account of this Moneths promises, Parturiunt Montes: we tug & labour to undo our selves. The Northwest of this Kingdom, & some other parts are highly discontent, much afflicted, ill satisfied, a small occasion would stir up a Rebellion among them: Many are the Petitions presented this Month; would God the Parlia. had Treasure to satisfy every one. The month begins wth cold, snowy, mistling weather, more frost succeeds, wholesome gales of wind then do follow, & several Ships arrive to the Merchants content. About the 3^d week expect a condensed, troubled ayre, & such thick clouds, as shall disperse in several parts much snow, or many showers, to the Country-mans great prejudice. The consultations of the Scot. nation are much enquired after, and we hear of them more then is true; their consults are not yet mature. Me thinks we hear of an angry Souldier at home; but alas! who pitties? who sends money & cloths to the poor, but wel-deserving Irish Souldier? Now remember valiant Inchequin and honorable Jones, men infinitely deserving; if the weather retard not, you shall hear those noble Souls are active. At home we feare some turbulent results, & justly we may; Remissionem

FEBRUARIES Observations

The Southern winds or South-west blow fair, and the frost or cold is more remisse. Plausible words or promises are good cheap, but pious actions succeed not.
 are lul'd asleep, & hope well: but observe, a distem-per'd people break out, cry out & upbraid their Superiors with breach of trust. Here's none or little agreemēt; the fury of an enraged people, like a whirl-wind, is ready to make irruption into the bowels of her oppressors! How long, O God, wilt thou suffer us to be miserable? Most worthy Jones, Inchequin, Coor, and honorable Col. More, behold the Stars inform me, that it is you act against the villain Irish, for now division, poverty, famine, scarcity approacheth neer them; you some of you are promised very much, yea this moneth, if the season with you permit, I need not rest the part of Heaven, Providence will doe it for you. How scurvily we disagree? what can be expected from this selfnesse but confusio of the authors? crosse, misapert Petitions, scandalous Informations, perniticious Pamphlets undo our State, appear plentifully eve on their faces. An appearāce of many or some eminent men to be questioned or committed. The Souldier is all angry, the Country-man highly displeased, the citizens at a stand, impregnated but not yet delivered. The eight day □ of ♀ snow or rain, ventorum concursus cum nivibus: 14. die more cleer, but yet rainy or snowy, afterwards fierce winds and various turbulent weather; towards the latter end of the month unseasonable & high winds, occasioning some losse at Sea on the Southwest parts of this Kingdom, &c. I nothing like this Moneths actions, nor may I speak

MARCHES Observations.

Ur Parlia. or Governours of the Affairs of this Kingdom, are wearied with multiplicity of ad- News from the North arrives, so also from Ire- th appear to be good, yet little pleasing to some tractors. Matters are carried very occultly, & some ions of moment are smothered: here's great pled- ing and stickling to raise parties, many are dispers- into severall parts of this Kingdom, to hawk mat- to undo their fellow- Subjects, for there's but one ing, and England endures no more. 20 die □ h & q am humidam ac ventosam minatur, & aliquādo vehemens et ventus, pluviasque cum tonitribus commiscet, fiat etiam nunquam Septentrio. We are crossed by petty, absurd fellows, who grow potent and would domineer, but our Senators scorn to buckle: our Sculdiers elevate their conceptions; the whole Kingdom stands in an aze- ment. Now the Scot is teared: then doubtfull newes from severall places afflicts us. How wicked are the minds of men who labour our confusiō? behold the Scot is honorable: what! twice in one month com- fortible newes from our Irish Commanders! blessed Souls are yee: It from hence no check runs to Dublin how fair an accompt may this wasted Kingdom ex- pect from the present Commanders. The painfull Country-man is promised a good seasonable Seed- time, yet the Weather inclines more unto moysture then driness. But what have I to doe with the Wea- ther? civill high matters, grand deliberations are approaching, Aut Caesar aut nihil: this moneth begins the dance, a yeer hence may end it.

APRILS Observations.

God is very mercifall to us, if for many days together we smart not with unseasonable gusts of wind, storms, hail, sudden tempestuous weather, to our great discontent. Our Grandees or many of our principall Gentry and Officers dissent, disagree, and are not the publike proceeds on foot. A Populous people there are who cannot obey, or know how to obey, are now ill disposed, mutter and tacitly rebellious, fear is more prevalent with them then there is love. Behold on a suddē what hopes of a fair reconcilement we have ! God grant a true understanding mixt our great ones and one great one, and then all happy are we generally. I protest Scotland if thou dost affront or intrench upon us, as the unadvised would have thee, we shal be sure of victory. Good & evil, good, ill and not ill is signified to the Londoners, whom I mention not so oft as perhaps is expected. Give English Parlia. fear not the male-contented, thy Angel-Protector is very potent, his name is not Michael, but is he powerfull : Ventos frigidiores expellemus, nebulasque cum rore cadentes : Why dost thou frown Londoner ? thou art but a portion of England ; be not seduced with, or by the tyrannicall Divine. Welcome sweet Messenger from Ireland, what newes dost thou bring ? famine, mortality, & most horrible division is now there, great deserting each other ; poor bestiall Kingdome, thy Angel is a coward, but the English Angel is active. Hark, the preparation of the French arrives amongst us, but to little purpose. The death of one Grande approacheth. Scorn and dislike doth now begin to take place upon the heart of one of the tallest English Cedars. When we can agree, then we will send assistance to the noble English in Ireland.

MAYES Observations M

The Souldiers shift their Quarters, demean themselves with much civility, and address to their Superiours for favours. Strange things are whispered; people feare a sad divinity unto some great one, they swell with expectation of the to undoe us by mi-understandings! but Providence dis-

 We may feare the Plague or some pestilentiall Disease to gst her children. A not visible Eclipse augments misfor-

JUNE'S Observations.

Ever the months beginning here seems disagreement about Petitions, or an ungentle Message.
 Londoners begin to be high, yet not sufficiently ident; they fear the Sicknes, not wholly without : verily if themselves are not froward no ill is at the. The Stars whisper a tumult, or a melâchopeople fear disturbance. Words or Petitiōs are not resent pleasing to our State, engaged in greater ars: I hope we may expect a day of thanksgiving a victory over the Irish, which seems not obtainawithout the death of an eminent Worthy on our Dubia aeris constitutio, moventur venti Occidentales. very probable we shall have thunder, lightning, a strange face of heaven for many dayes. We are solitated for moneys, whilst severall rumors come in the North, little pleasing; not long after true sure newes comes from Scoll, in which Kingdom eters are now variously handled, the results wherwe earnestly long after, for we seem plunged, or most mired in our home-resolutions: we consult of ny things, conclude nothing, are in fear of the an-Souldier; yet there are good men and wise amongst us, who ally reconcile a sturdy people, apt to take an occasion to urb themselves and Common-wealth. Here seems an accusa-or impeachment brought against a prime man. A second ele Solar not visible; absolutely we shall have newes from the th; the effects will appear in those parts, Nil desperandum motion, or declare the minds of the Commonalty & Soul-extremely exasperated. God blesse London from Sicknesse JULIES Observations.

The malevolent Planets γ and δ separate slowly, nor are they yet without the limits of the \square of great are the actions of these moneths; the contations of the times are in excess; little moderation is used; mercy is wanting to the distressed sick people: Christians perish; a Sicknesse wanders far & the mischief now raging is like to be permanēt our divisions are fomented by supream cōviance: the wooden Clergy act their parts, the Souldier is not stinting, his poverty enforceth him, but the quarrell not among petty people, the Cedars shake. There yet a peaceable people amongst us, who by prudence and moderation regulate our despairing conditions: how many meetings have we? or what pains the honest hearted take to pacifie a giddy multitude. High desires may arrive from the North; our state, if the heavē's deceive me not, are in an honourable condition, are not much disturbed in their resolutions. Good Sir, be not so peremptory, a religious party little fear the threats thou bringest. Why cannot the Citizens thrive and be pleasant? a time now approaching, which imports felicity unto them: remove, move the male-contented, beleeye the Clergy but a little; let them preach Doctrine, but no State-policy. The French have now pleasing intelligence, a Victory is neer unto them: nor are destitute of what content us from our friends in several parts of the world. If an Angel were President in this present Parl. he must take matter to please a stiff-necked people; who neither know how to command but with pride, nor to obey without dislike.
 When all matters seem reconciled, behold there arrives very importunate Peritions, or surly words, or rather aspersions are divulged; whereupon succeeds much melancholly and sadness in many peoples hearts; many fearing an irruption into the Northern parts, whilst we are not in perfect unity in the South and City.

AUGUST'S Observations.

TIME atque fratres, sed attendite; the day of judgment is not at hand, but verily matters of greatest consequence are neer agitation, both with us in Engl. and over Europe. I love thee Spain, but now beware of imminent treachery, be careful of thy Officers this moneth; the Planets and their intelligences speak as this moneth would produce a very great fight at sea, and much action betwixt the Turk & Venetian, as so with the Swede & Germane. Austrian family be not numerous, the effects of the Comet in 1618. is now almost extinguished, after which thou oughtst to flourish yet a while. But at home, why have we so many obvious enemies, wishing ill to those have preserved us all? O the sad condition of Magistrates! behold now the wicked backbite, & spue out viperous language against them. Here appears very great division and great distractiō seems to be neer; if the influence of the Caniculars was not now extinguished by their setting, I should fear a generall dog-raging madnesse amongst us, we do so snarl at one another. News arrives from the northwest, nothing welcome or pleasing; it at instant seems the forerunner of some mischief, but a few days informs us the matter is not so hainous. If no suppression be of irregular pamphlets about this time here do most wretched ones appear, much to the dishonour of the Parliam. If we can agree amongst our selves in a law, which I hope we shall, it's not the least or the worst news I expect from thence; Circa hoc tempus, apparet ventus procellosus, torridus, grand natus, imitiosus, violentus, qui arboria evertit, arbores destruit, arbores sternit, & plaustra onerata percellit: Thunder also and lightning is like to be; afterwards mens minds are upon mischief, and the crosse influence of heaven stirs up much secret malice amongst us, so doth it in Ireland amongst the naturals, by means whereof we attain either a victory absolute, or somewhat of much moment.

SEPTEMBERS Observations.

The uncomfortable aspects of the preceding moneth, may be the instruments of much good to come in this: If the fate of Monarchy be not inevitably decreed for suppressiō in these Kingdoms of Engl. and Irel. or if the immediate hand of God be not at present against it, I then conceive his Majesty and many great persons are very neer a restauratiō to former dignities. As I was ever a faithfull lover of Monarchy, and of his Majesty as my Sovereign, so am I still, and shall continue, our Parl. and the just rights of the English involved in them, entirely preserved. He thinks, at least, we are promised fair, God almighty give his Majesty what is due unto him, and to us of the Commonalty our native Birthright without impeachment: Let's have no juggling, but let us understand one another rightly, and then is my soul full of hopes that the consultations of this moneth shall exceedingly tend to the good of the whole Nation, and many heavy impositions lessened, or quite taken off from the Commonalty: ¶ 4 & 5 ventos movet ab occasu, & adventem hyemem minatur Spica Virginis occidens vespere cum 10. gradibus. The Londoners now have no such molestations, but that they may with much freedom elect their Lord Mayor; concerning whose election I find no great stickling; without doubt is elected, let him enjoy it, the man is discreet and well spoken, &c. From beyond Seas, we hear the French are Rampant, and the Emperour is not unfortunate; the Tenent brags but a little of this moneths actions; formidable actions in the West-Indies: The Portugals rather keep their owne in those Countreies by trechery then man-hood: Truly I wish the Hollanders good successe, which they may now expect; yet all is not well handled there by their Officers; those provident people must expect a period of their greatnesse, yet it is a gem must not see it.

The affairs of the English Commonwealth continue in a peaceable & quiet condition, no present distractions doe I foresee. From the West arrives newes from London, which in my judgment portends us good, yet are we doubtful, & a little afflicted with mistrust, but time reveals the very truth, to our exceeding content, the matter is materiall. per incerta stans producitur, ventorum magnus adest. The Southerly wind is high, the Merchant fears Westward: be of good comfort ye victorious soul, thy losse is not so great, I hope none at all: & intrans in subitas tempestates cum vento & pluvio multo movet: we may expect rain or showers in abundance. If God almighty suffer the influence of his creatures to take effect, farewell stinking Irish Rebel, for by this time, or in this month, our worthy Soldiers make thee run, while we possesse thy habitations and thy fertile fields, with what wealth thou cruelly extortedst from our murdered Country-men. Industrious Hollanders you may expect a victory over the West-India Portugals in Brazil, your Ships bring plenty of Returns, to the Merchants great advantage. At home I fear we have some verball scuffling, or double a treachery or plots, indeed there is mischief intended, but the Actors will timely be discovered, we shall not suffer by it, for they will be deservedly rewarded. From what part Northward comes this Messenger? what ill tidings brings he? either such a thing, or eminent persons are accused and informed against: □ S & ventos Occidentales movet: towards the latter end of the moueth we are molested with peremptory demands, or prick-eared fellows would domineer over their betters; wooden-witted men, they are neither obeying God, loving their King, or caring for the Parliament, or that Committee which in intervals must be respected. The moneth concludes well, with good words and actions, an universal welfare is expected.

NOVEMBERS Observations

How sweetly this moneth begins, how mournfully it ends ! (if God by his divine providence divert not the malevolent influence of his creatures the Stars.) Want of money, clamors for arrears, suits about preceding damages, and trespasses generally afflict us; would this were all. Mens stomachs are full of revenge and anger : the winds rise high, the Seas roar and swell, & the laments of Europe are many for the impoverished Merchant. Our Citizens are in the number of men, losse they must expect. Cold frosts, or a penetrating sharp ayre afflicts the Northeast parts of this Kingdom, enforcing the poor Farmer to begin the Winter early. Justice seems to questio Offenders, and they not of inferiour rank: can nothing but discord undo us, and must we now unseasonably begin ? we are mad or besotted with the nationall sin of this Kingdom Division Many theevish pranks and horrible robberies in houses in this City, and upon the High-ways, are this moneth committed: some steal publicly, others rob the Republick privately, both ought to be hanged Will our Magistrates and Superiours never unite : shall the Devil ever grin at their perpetual discord, and must we or the Commonalty suffer eternally ? At this time I fear approacheth to some, to one, to more, to a family, nay to many I hope our Senators will be wary, there are that hunt and sneal in corners to mischief them. I see great dissenting of opinion in our Grantees, and their serious consultations frequently interrupted by private and secret practices Of the Lunar Eclipse this moneth I intend to write apart in the general judgment of the year What pains is taken to do his Majesty disservice : how the pragmaticall insulting Priest acts his part, preaching Politi-cisme more then Religion : ungodly men, you cannot prevent Providence by Tyranny; I doubt some will be unprosecuted for Murde-or Treason, &c. God's mercy is great amidst his judgments, for his peaceable Angel miraculously lessens much of the evill intended : and why ? many honest souls of the Lay-people (few of the Clergy) stand in the gap and overcome God by prayer.

DECEMBERS Observations.

Second Eclipse, this of ☉ not visible, yet above the earth, here will effects succeed, and they not an ones; God acts by his Messengers. Here are ten its eclipsed; some King or Prince loses a branch or arm of his Regality. Clandestine consultations on not, the actions of the month superlative, requiring more prophetick and divine Pen, then poor innocent Anglicus. Tranquillissima tempestas nobis evenire solet in Brumale Solstitium, aliquādo sine ventorum flabris, cum temperatura & aliquomodo serena est, terraque gelu maxima stringitur, ut nihil ferè vaporum è terra educi potest; discontented Citizens mutter and repine, I fear the strict they have a hand in fomenting their rage. More discord is evident and many sad complaints arrive from the Souldier and the Country-man, both in great necessity; the Souldier for his pay, the Farmer for better weather. It's probable our Parliament will be moved to indignation concerning certaine passages acted against them, for treasonable plots are hatching to divide or destroy them: the not suppression of illicit Pamphlets doe much prejudice their Honours. This year now ending, tranquillity seems to conclude it, the blessing of God going along with the cordiall intentions of our Senators.
 God almighty restore his Majesty, blesse the Parliament and the whole Kingdome of England, their Councils, their Armies; God defend our Irish friends, that have so many times acted valiant things this year. I submit my predictions to divine Providence; I hold no farall necessary; I love the modest Divine here ere I find him; I hate the wrangling Presbyter: I love the Army for the good we have received from them, so also the pots; if the one or other doe ill, I am then convertible: God esse with long life my assured friend in the North, and all his family. Nives cum ventis occidentalibus produunt posteriores as- tus hujus mensis.

The

the generall Contingencies of ENGLAND, SCOTLAND and IRELAND Astrologically predicted for this present year 1648.

*Hercle, restat regnum aliud, piis Cælo sub amplo, bestia cum cader Dandum, potestatisque summae Jus, pede sub dominante Christi

THE malevolent influence of that prodigious Comet in 1618. so fatall to Germany and most Kingdomes of Europe, being now by the divine permission of almighty God, transmitted by his ministring Angels beyond our English Horizon unto more remote parts, we must expect and search out some neerer causes, and later Celestial Configurations to direct our present Conceptions, for better discovery of such generall affairs as may happily be of speciall con-cernment to our beloved Mother England, her Sister Scotland, and our rebellious Servant the Kingdome of Ireland. A most difficult labour we undertake, for if we write meerly in Astrall terms and language, we edifie very few; and if we straine a judgment

An Astrological judgment judgment from the Intelligences or Presiding Angels, which the first then lesse understood and by some suspected; if we deliver intentions in vulgar termes, we are wholly mistaken in things, our sense perverted, and our sentences so variously plied, & unto such a sinister construction, as we were never ty, no not in thought; the consideration whereof had so dis-raged our pen, that we never had any further intentions of tring upon the publike stage again in this annuall way of cature: but God who by his diuine Providence disposeth all humane actions, & who of late extended great mercies unto hath once again, even from a desperate and forlorne condi-raised & elevated our Astral conceptions, & stir'd up in us subsequent judgments, which we now emit into the mercuworld, to be slanderously or ignorantly traduced. This pre-9. March 1648. we have the distempered effects of those Pa-or three Suns, visible April 3. last, yet forcibly operating, not determined: we are also subject at this present to the ence good or evil, of that last ☐ of ♄ & ♃, Sept. 30. ult. but effects are declining, & we are approaching to receive but and portion of that heavenly influence which God shall the second ☐ of ♄ & ♃ now imminent this 29. of March in to shour down upon us, for it will work violently. The 27.

min. of ☿ is this yeer the Profectional ascendant of their last upon which very degree, and almost minute ♄ by his transit now this 9. of March passe; ♃ being by progresse arrived to the first deg. of ♄, in partil dexter ☐ to the radical place of ♄ in that ☿; and if we enquire for the very Profectional Sign of ☿ it self, we shall find it 25°. 46'. of ♈, unto which very deg. the bountifull Planet ♃ this yeer by his transit doth not at all proceeding Ret. in ♈ but to the 19. deg. thereof, meeting withstanding before his egress out of ♈, yea even in that degree with a ☿ dexter of ☉ Apr. 8. following our present gress: from these configurations at present (as being our Birth) must we naturally, and according to Art extract our ensuing judgment for this present yeer 1648. wherein God direct us.
What our judgment was upon the quadrant of Saturne Jupiter, Septemb. 1647. you shall here have related (ver-aim) out of our Prophetical Marline, pag. 108.

gels, with first quadrature of Saturn and Jupiter Sept. 30. 1647. e deliver arriving to the place of ζ in the \odot , and Jupiter to a \square of ken in transit; the peregrination of Jupiter in that Sign, notwithstanding variously double debility in Signe and house, viz. if there were then no never hand-dealing, juggling, shirking, and dissembling fellows in and so forth, we might hope well, and that with some trouble we should tions of it, taste the fruits of Peace, or have a glimpse of it: but way of the hypocritical Religious-Saints, or the disturbed Trade sesh all impoverished people produce nothing; or above all this, the es untimely and unimely death of a gallant; and not to be par econdemned Generall, or brave Field-Officer put us in confusion, I in us cannot: here's much time spent to no purpose; but it being not merited, first time foul actions smother over deceitfull pretences, I leave is preterposed to God; let the Sun shine upon the Author this yeer, & omnia de Pace. These were our predictions; let the Kingdome it selfe ting, maintaine our sense and meaning without mis-application. We the time now to deliver that judgment w^{ch} naturally ariseth from
 tr. by the dispositures and configurations preceding, upon the \odot his en our entrance into the first point of γ ; the figure erected here for our meridian of London hath \approx 26. 58, ascending; which because in the a movable Sign, according to the judgment of some, shall re us judgment but of three moneths affaires, viz. untill the 1647. enter the Sign \odot : the words of Bonatus, fol. 527. are these, 72. quidem ascendens fuerit signum mobile, non durabit illa revolu- to the tiō usq; ad introitum \odot in \odot , & tunc oportebit te equare ad mes quartas anni, eriq; dominus prima quarta ille cuius fuerit minium in introitu \odot in γ , &c. when the Signe ascending is movable, that Revolutiō endures but untill the the \odot his entrance into \odot , & then you must erect figures for the other three quar ters of the year. He shal be Lord of the first quarter of the yeer who hath dominion at \odot his entrance into γ , &c. and so of every planet who is Lord of the figure in the Solstitial, Autumnal, Hy wnt quarter. thus be. But I take it to be thus understood, that then in any annual revolution, the beginning, middle or greater part of a movable Signe possesseth the asc. that then we ought to change and vary our figure four severall times, as he directs; but when the latter degrees of a movable Sign ascend, & there remains but two or three within the house, I then justly affirm, and and with reason maintain that the Lord of the Subtler shall more properly governe, and be called Lord of the dant, then that Planet who solely hath dominion but of three degrees, and therefore in our Scheme I do say that have some signification of ovr people & the G.ve hours of English affairs; but of who is most potent of all the Planets Lord of all the succeeding Signe, shall most powerfully significantly represent them and their actions, which as are like to be various, so of very high concernment, and be managed by our workes of Parliament with much mode-tion, justice and integrity, to their owne eternall honour perpetuall good of the whole English Nation, and of this the Commonalty of England b. most assured, &c. I have desire to be copious, or to enlarge a judgment beyond the only scope of a Revolution being as follows, Per romem, autem mundi, scilicet quid in illis annis sit futurum no aut malo, virum anus sit, et angustias in importunas, & in guerra futura an non, quibus sit status regum, principum maritum, similiter et populorum, atque dilectum & religiosum etiam inuicem quem inesse, inuicemque generis unum ter secundum b. minus ritus, quid de terra inuentibus sit futurum ut, ut ex eis abundantia et penuria expectetur, quodque unum eorum aut pile, pag. 489.

We know by the Revolution of the years of the world, what manner of accident shall happen in that year, whether good evil, whether the year will be peaceable, or if warres will sue therein, yea or not; what shall be the condition of Kings Princes & Noble-men as also of the common sort of people, of low and poor degree, of the Religions, yea, of every man his kind, and of every other thing universally, according to the property of man therein; what increase we may expect from the fruits of the earth, whether from thence plenty or scarcity may be expected, and what manner of Commodities will be cheap, what dear, &c.

In this manner did the Antients proceed in their judicature which method we now intend to follow, for we are in peace, and have no open enemy though a million of private ones.

Forasmuch then as the Signe attending is movable, upon the present affairs of Europe.

gens & cambians res; we may probably conjecture, that there is a great change or mutability of humane affairs approaching, especially concerning the Rites, Priviledges, Lawes and Customes of this Kingdome of England, and whole Commonalty therein included; and as the Signe possident both the cusps of the first and twelfth houles, so it imports the great willingnesse of many noble soules to draw out disordered matters to a faire and seasonable conclusion; and it doth also decipher the clandestine practices of others, and they no small ones, to prolong our home-bred differences: and the Stars informe us, hat these unequal distempers, or unseeled relents, seem to be on foot much about or very neer the time of the beginning of this years Revolution: but in regard I hath no great continuance of her domination in the Vernall quarter, but leaves her rule unto O, who enters upon his command about May, and what then the domination of the succeeding part of the year is in a manner wholly committed unto him, clandestine practices shall now faile, and businesse shall be fairly and judiciously carried, and as then the remainder of the years actions may be deputed from O, who then regulates the ascending Signe M, being fixed, we may not doubt, but that from a troubled and long continued Series of doubtfull distempers, we shall about those times arrive to most seiled condition, and enjoy our Customes, Trades and Priviledges in quietnesse and contented security: This is generally intended to the Countreman in all parts of the Kingdome as well, if not more then to the Citizen.

Seeing Q is partly Lady of the ascending, and O in the house of V, and V in the tenth house: as also that O who usually hath representation of the common condition of men kind Quasi Sol pro Vagabundo, Luna pro pauperibus, viz. the O for the Magistrate, the V for Subjects or common people, I say it is not unfortunate, but is applying to O, as we have great reason, according to A. r. to hope well, and to expect Good blessings, and to live in assurance that the Commonalty of the Kingdome shall doe well, and every one at his own house, at his Vocation and calling live quietly and secure. Verily there is no fiction of our owne, but the opinion of those reverend Professors that studied this Science long before us, from whom O

In anni & quartarum Revolutionibus aut thematibus Lunationum, si Luna, siue firma & potens, sit in angulo, vel succedat domo & Dignitatibus suis, siue debilis & cadens extra Dignitates, applicuerit benefico alicui Planete Jovi vel Veneri, significabitur status populi fortunatus quo lucra eidem accrescent & abundant necessaria, & si applicuerit Veneri, erit hilaritas, gaudium & frequentia concubinum.

In the Revolutions of a yeer, and quarterly ingresses, or of the severall Schemes of Lunations, if the ☾ whether she be fixed or powerfull in an angle or else in a succedant house, and in her owne Dignities; or if she be weak, or cadent, and not in any of her Dignities; and yet shall apply to any benevolent Planet, whether it be Jupiter, or Venus, the state or condition of the Commonalty shall be signified successefull and fortunate; in which yeer they shall increase their Estates, and shall abound in all manner of necessary provisions; and if that Fortune unto whom the ☾ shall apply be Venus (as now it is) the common people shall much enjoyce, be frolick and very cheerfull, and freely suffer their Sonnes and Daughters to marry, so that upon a sober consideration hereof, if we may confide in the words of our Author, it's not onely like to be a good yeer in the generall, but such a one as wherein every poor Country man is promised very faire; yet because ☿ doth apply to the ☐ of ♀ in the eighth house, Plurimi morientur, many aged men shall in this yeer dye, more then usually in another yeer they are wont, and these of the vulgar people, or people who daily labour in earthly Commodities.

But if any shall object, That Mars is the most considerable Planet, not onely in the Vernall ingresse, but also in all other quarters, and Lunations of the yeer, and therefore we may justly suspect him the fore-runner of more War or bloodshed, Unto this I say, That he doth not alwayes signify War in every Revolution, or quarterly ingresse, although he chanceth to be most dignified; for we must warily pronounce judgment upon such a posture, for it's considerable, whether the generall influence of all the other Planets doe concurre with him; and or whether the ascendant of the King promise any such matter, whether the King or principall Ruler or Rulers of that Common-wealth have any malevolent Directions coincident with that malevolent Revolution, &c. or whether the effects of any preceding Eclipse or Comet did pronounce War, and is then in force.

What ♂ A ♂ is posited in our Revolution, he doth not premonstrate Wars, Slaughters or seditious and Commotions as our eyes have beheld; he as now posited in the Heavens, threatens us with sad discontents, back-slidings in Religious matters & Ceremonies, great disconsolation amongst the Clergy, and high demands or rebukes amongst the Schismatical, the setting of, or a strong endeavour to settle the just Laws, Proceedings and Customs of the people: & it doth signifie, that these disgusts generally are not to happen amongst the inferior people, but amongst the principall Gentry of every County, and greatest Citizens of every City, and in plain terms, amongst our greatest Statesmen, or such as do regulate the affairs of our English Common-wealth. I write thus much to undeceive any of our Nation, that being not well versed in the fundamentals of Astrology, might be misled either by the erroneous fancy of their own judgment, or blind mistakes of such an ass as George Wharton, and so might be timorous of new broyles to arise amongst our selves in this Kingdome, which may heart utterly abhors. I have authority to countenance my opinion, for if we believe Haly, fol. 360. he informes us, that if, as posited in our Scheme, shall not prejudice us; his words are, Semper in revolutione, cave, & respice Martem: quia si bonus fuerit, & in bono statu, melius uccedet negotium, vastationum regis & exercituum. In every Revolution, be well advised in giving judgment, and have respect to the place of Mars, for if he be well qualified, and in a good state, the affaires of the King's Subjects and their Armies shall well succeed. An assured testimony it is, that our Commonwealth of England shall not in this present year be molested with Warre, or much grieved or offended with the Souldiers, so that the Country-man and honest Farmer may with quiet and contented minds serve God, follow their daily employments, and may also live secure from plundering o any rapine or oppression of his Superiours, or of the Commonweale. But if it be conceived our judgment hertin is partiall (because we ever affect the Parliament, and some malevolent spirits thinke otherwayes) then I say the Arabicke dealing in this point may much advantage us, which runs thus in Italich, fol. 34. Nra quod Planeta qui est Dominus & significator anni, quando inuenerit in aliquo signum, significat secundum propriam tempesti- suus Planete, & secundum eius proprietatem loci in quo be: statu de domibus figure, & secundum statum, & eius fortitudinem & infirmitatem; quia per fortitudinem & bonum statum, significat bonum & meliorem successum & gaudium, &c. & si quando Mars salus fuerit, significat quod homines vincant homines inimicos suos qui erant eius & minus ab occasione huius, &c.

Obserue that Planet who is Significator of the year, and in which of the twelve Signes he is found, be assured he shall signifye according to the propriety of that Planet, Signe and House of heaven wherein he is posted, and according to his state, fortune or infortunatenesse. For that Planete well fortified shall signifye good successe, joy and gladnesse, &c. and if at any time & shall be so posted or qualified in a Revolution, it imports the Commonality shall overcome and destroy those enemies that shall become their enemies, and themselves shall remaine safe and saved harmless, or protected from all further occasions: for as I said before, unless a generall Calamity be impending upon a Kingdom or Country, the sole position of a Planet in his dignities in any Revolution cannot portend War. We have him now singularly qualified, by his existence in a good House of Heaven, and in the House of a peaceable Planete, and so applying unto a ♀ of ♄, who is Lord of the fourth, as if we might with more confidence expect an end of our long suffering, then a new Hurleburly or War. For further confirmation of our preceeding judgment, let us have recourse to the Protectionall House of the last & of ♄. We have therin to have great domination, the latter degrees of ♄ are ascending; we also have ♄ who is Lord of ♄, Englands copicall Signe, in his owne house; and if we consider a descendant upon the ♄ of ♄ and ♄ in the 28. of June this year, we shall find it about four degrees of ♄, very neer to the profectional degree of \odot By all the positions and from all the according & subsequent Configurations, I conclude according to naturall causes, that we shall not this year be afflicted by any Foreigner, either Scottish (for they are too honourable) or French (for they will have work enough at home) or Irish, &c. for certainly the prevalence of our Kingdoms Place imports no cause of feare unto us of any invasion, and voluntarily so powerful he is, that it may deter the advance of any Nation whatsoever amongst us, Deus enim dedit Angliam inmensamque ad diem iudicii, &c. having delivered our conceptions upon the generall state of Eng and, as to the probability of War or Peace, we now come to discourse every Planets particular signification, as posited in the Revolution, and from thence will enlarge as occasion shall offer.

As to the particular person and fate of his Majesty, I have now very few words to say, he being not at present in armes against the Parliament: his Significator is very properly this year \odot , posited in the fifth house, & departing from him, and by a retrograde motion applying to his Δ , both of them in terminis ultimis signorum; this configuration promisseth him faile, argues that he is or may be near some Treary or unity with his people, it fully and perfectly concludes it not: for the good of the Kingdome I wish a settled peace; that wandring Gypsic wharion is as farre mistaken in his partiall judgment upon \odot his being in the sixth, as when he prophesied of a Running-Match at Oxford, for he said in his scandalous impudent Prog: Rex periret ad pristinum suum Dominum & re-nobabuntur res: God grant he may doe so: but this posture of Heaven is negative as unto that judgment, \odot is in the sixth in his Figure, Si \odot fuerit in sexta habebit Rex illa in anno ista nam, Hgty. 378. But let us proceed, and hear the opinion of Haly in other matters, pag. 374. At si Δ in Decima infortunatus fuerit, erunt iusti & communitur in omnibus hominibus illius climatis, & habebunt honorem & mercedem & pietatem a sui regibus & Dominis, & lucrabuntur cum ipsis, as they shew the diuitem, so that here seems an equal distribution of justice by the Parliament and their subordinate Ministers in the severall parts of this Kingdome unto the people, and much honour un-them for their so great justice and piety in ordering the of this Common-wealth; but as to that high & mighty res-beforementioned, there is not one syllable for defence of the nion. We find h L. of the 4th posited in the 8th, the cuspo-is in the Terms of h, the Sign is his house, and he posited in 8th, Quando h fuerit in octava domo, accidunt morces in animalibus que sunt de natura istius signi, siquidem fuerit quadrupedum, enur an malis, si fuerit in signo humano morientur homines & senes: When in an annual Revolution we find him the eight there will be a dearth or scarcity of such creatures as that Sign presents wherein he is; if he be in a Sign representing four-footed Beasts, there will be a scarcity of such Cattle: if he change be in a humane Sign, which represents generally man-kind, an argument of the Plague, or of the death of many ancient people: As here he is posited in our figure, he threatens the Husband-man with losse as to his greater Cattle, or some ven-vy disease unto them, whereby he shall receive much losse and damage, and these Cattle should be Horse and Oxen. And in deed in regard h is this year to meet with the σ of σ in ii, a aery Signe, it is like to be a very sickly yeer, and it is also prob-bable, the Plague will disperse it selfe into many parts of England, and will be violent for a time in the City of London, so so in the Western parts or North-west of this Kingdome; we may justly fear that there may be many distractions and very great discontentments, great scarcity of Grain and Corn, so that small famine in the more mountain Countreies of England may be feared: σ of h and σ in ii foretewes scarcity of Provision for in, & great distractions amongst men; Cum due Infortuna con- tingantur, & d h in latitudine, erit famis & mortalitas; When the two Infortunes are in σ , and d hath the same latitude w^{ch} h hath, Famine and Mortality succeeds. But why this σ shall be so fatal and ominous to the City of London, & stir up the effects of an E-lipse which appears & it will five moneths after, or why that σ shall procure unto the Governor such esteem from the Londoners, 's verily Utopian and Madigne Assolutio, and neither naturally deduced, or to be deduced from the positure of h and σ , any other that I know of. This I tell the City of London, had

I am willingly content to be silent, having received so civilities from many gallant Gentlemen who have been aged in his Majesties quarrel; what I speak is of the vulgar soldier, and such ill bred and necessitous fellows as Noworth followed the cause on foot, and never engaged but once, that in a poor Hog-sye, where he was well cudgell'd, for taking a Pig for the learned Campanella, &c. & in the tenth an earthly Signe, is an argument that Corn will be deare, the Clergy little satisfied, rather highly male-contented:

in causis hominum, & d. unum in reddendis regum & eorum factis, ac discordias & labores quae accidunt inter homines vane legis, Haly f. 391. In that yeer, when in the Revolution you find that Applieth unto h py & aspect, he doth then signifie labour and travell unto man-kind, damage in the Revenues of ings, and impediments in their actions, & many controversies amongst men in regard of the Law, or for Priviledges and Cutomes, or it more properly imports, in regard that his Lord of rable Law-suits & unreasonable quarrels about Lands, and the inheritances of men, detained for some time from them, but for-much as Q is in the 4th, its the opinion of Haly, finis illius anni est melior & felicius suo principio: that although the yeer began somewhat boisterously, and many verball contentions may be therein, yet are we assured that the end of the yeer shall conclude with much more content then it began: but Wharton being sorry it should be so, runs on with this judgment of Haly's, as impernently & maliciously as may be, Haly 373. Si d fuerit in quarta & signum facit infortunatum erit fortiter populus obsessus, & accident ei careeres & anxietates graves. Id. d be in the fourth: & the sign therof infortunate (perhaps the people, saith Wharton) the word is fortiter, the common people will be much straitned. The sign of the fourth is Q, & Q is therein, if the Sign itself be not ocunated by Q I am mistaken, and must learn ignorance of the poor Ineake; but this by way of catechizing, &c. Of the Kingdom of Ireland, upon which the sad influence of h in O fall in great abundance; as also the miserable effects of h and V March 22. 1648. I say thus much, That there arise in that Kingdom, so great and fierce Wars, so great horrible disunion in all matters, betwixt the great men the popular sort; there will be such unheard of discord, and such uncommensurable quarrels and heart-bittings amongst the principal Citizens of every or most of the Cities of that Kingdom, that in many of them the Sonne be against the Father, the Wife against the Husband, the servant against his Master, one Neighbour against another, the Country betrays the next, this Noble-man his Neighbour's Castle surrenders to day, another by treason the next, the sword of Gods destroying Angel is now drawne forth at hand, and is falling upon that devilish people to devour them.

The Signe ascendant of that Kingdom is afflicted by the presence of h, and is also posited in the eighth house thence, litigia causa Petitionum hereditarium, seu reparationum murturum, & causa Petitionum antiquarum rerum, & contristationem causa mortis, & significat res quarum dolus & angustia seu tristitia du ducabit. Many shall be their sad complaints about losse of their Inheritances, and the Estate of their deceased friends; many dissolving Friendships shall they offer our English Generals, and Commanders of our Forces, and grievous complaints shall be amongst themselves by reason of the death and mis-carriage of their Kinred, engaged in this rebellious quarrell; but the severest, repulse and content which they shall receive from our noble English, shall befall and so great, that the Irish shall unsafely accure to the number of their present calamities, for of their sufferings they or their children shall see no end: having therefore been otherwise promised by that Madapian Astrologer, and the very Icon of Art Scribe Wharton, they begin to curre both the one and other, the Madapian for an idle, and Norwich for a fellow without judgment or honesty, but a meet Changeling.

Of the Kingdom of Scotland I have little to say, but that Janus, with two faces lives amongst many of that Nation, &c.

upon the present affaires of Europe.

In few moneths these seem much reuivertation in many people; but yet I doe find the good hand of God will be the Nationall Councell of that people: so that from we may expect all actions corresponden to nobility and peace: in which good mind I doubt not but their Majesties will in this yeer preserve them, for in very deed, I see any probability of their returning into the northern parts, or that they have any will, or intention to harme us. from my heart, I wish our owne Nation of England prove as constant for the good of our Kingdome, as that rect and frugal people are for theirs. I might further enlarge this Discourse, and write of the Eclipse in November visible in England; but because the effects thereof shall not manifest themselves untill 1649. I do now forbear, intending God will to begin an easie method in the next years A. N. 1648. for judging Eclipses.

97 The matter or thing in question which is demanded will be performed in a short time, when either the Lord of the new or full ☽ is Cardinall.

98 Blazing-stars, and shootings of the Stars in the Ayre (or prodigious apparitions therein) have a second signification in mundane affaires, viz. Eclipses are in the Heavens but apparitions in the Ayre, therefore events portended by Eclipses are first preferred.

89 Fiery apparitions shew want of raine or a dry ayre, which if they are carried or moved unto one part of heaven, they declare wind to come from that quarter of heaven : but if those apparitions are carried diversly unto sundry parts, they shew scarcity of raine or waters, the Elements often troubled, and the incursions of Armies.

100 Comets, whose distance is eleven Signes from the Sun, if they appear in Angles, the King of some Kingdome, or one of the principall men of the Kingdom will dye ; but if they appear in a succedent house, his Treasurers are like to dye ; yet shall the King or Kingdome change their Governour ; if they appear in a cadent or obscure house, diseases and deaths wil succeed : if they move from the west toward the east, a forreigne Enemy shall invade severall Kingdomes or Countries : if the Comet move not, the enemy shall be Provinciall.

The Astrolicall Aphorismes of HERMES.

HERMES said, The ☉ and ♃ next unto God the Creator, are the life of all living Creatures; the Nativities of many men have no Hyleg: but because the ☉ and ♃ behold the ascendant with benevolent aspect, no Infortune being in the ascendant, the lives of such men are of longer continuance.

2 All diurnall Genitures are strengthened by the ☉ when she is in configuration with the benevolent; nocturnall Nativities, in like manner, by the ♃, when she is in aspect with the Heavenly Planets: If no such thing be, yet if the Fortunes be in tender Angles, the Nativity is sufficiently fortunate.

3 ♂ being Lord of the ascendant, and posited in the tenth or eleventh house, affords unto the Native dignity and power, which he will exercise with injury and violence; and ♂ his position in the twelfth house, may be rather accounted a curse then a blessing.

4 ♃ in aspect or configuration with the malevolent, changes their malice into goodnesse: ♀ can do no such thing, unlesse she be assisted of ♃, wherefore in the augmentation of what is good, and prohibiting what is evill, ♃ is reputed much better then ♀.

5 The Astrologer can frame no commixtion of the significations of the Planets or Stars, before he know wth are friends and which enemies to each other: their friendship and enmity is threefold; one according to their nature, the second according to their houses, the third according to their aspect.

6 ♀ is ever opposite to ♂, for he embraces Oratory, Learning; she Delights and Pleasures: so also ♃ and ♂, for ♃ loves Mercy and Justice; ♂ delights in Blood and Impiety.

Beneficiall Aphorismes.

7 A Question being asked concerning great Princes, whether the ☉, or one of the superiour Planets their Significators : of Scribes and Clownes, some of the inferiour Planets principally the ☿.

8 An aspect diminisheth not the signification of a ☿, and a ☿ lessens the influence of an aspect, for a ☿ is more sensible than an aspect.

9 Judge nothing or elect any thing positively, ♀ being in the ascendant, or when the Angles are of such Signes as descend obliquely, or if ☿ be therein ; for a wrong judgment will be given, and the event will prove contrary to the judgment, ♀ is a Sign of falsity.

10 Even a good Planet posited in the sixth or twelfth house, and therein impedit of the malevolent, produces ill to the Native or Querent from things signified by that house.

11 Rumours or Reports when first dispersed, the ☿ being then in the first ten degrees of ♀, are either false or forged of purpose.

12 There many times happens error in the judgment of Astrologers upon Questions, either by reason of the insufficiency of their instruments, or folly of the Querent, or when the ☉ is upon the degree of the cusp of the tenth house, or when the figures which doe either promise or deny the matter are equall.

13 Whilest the ☿ is Meridionall descending in latitude, and in ♀ or ♄, doe not begin to build, for an Edifice there erected will quickly come to ruine.

14 It's requisite ☿ be strong, and in houses of becom convenient and apt, and in proper aspect of other Planets in Nativities, when he shall be made Significator of Preference.

Beneficiall Aphorismes.

15 In Signs of double bodies, who overcomes hath an honorable Victory, but to be worsted is very ill; for the signification of either good or evill is duplicated. This hath relation to Warre, or Duels, or Law, and intimates nothing more but this, That when in the beginning of a Warre, or Law suit or Contention, the Significators are in Bicorporeal Signes, both parties act their parts stoutly; it's very ill therefore for him that is overcome.

16 Determine nothing before thou knowest the intention of the Querent, many know not what to ask, or can expresse what they would have.

17 When a Demand is made concerning the Father, behold the fourth house, for a Brother the third house, for a Son the fifth, for a Wife the seventh, for a sick party take no other house then the ascendant. This is somewhat different from the Ancients and reason it selfe; usually we take the ascendant, sixth house, or the ☽, which of them is most afflicted, to signifie the Disease in that manner of judgment, and herein we erre not.

18 When the ☽ shall come either to the ☐ of good or ill Planets, both the matter hindering and assisting shall be doubtful; and it may be feared, lest peradventure the malevolent Planets doe impedit, and that the Fortunes cannot help.

19 In the beginning of Journeys and returnes, let not the ☽ be in the ascendant, fourth or ninth, although she be not impedit: In entring a City let her not be in the ascendant, second or fourth, or in first entring a new house.

20 Three manner of wayes the accidents of men are predicted, viz. either by ones own proper Nativity, or the Generation of his first borne child, or by a question propounded, with a certaine certaine kind of affection, and strong desire to be resolved

21 The first beginning of any enterprize, being made by a retrograde Planet is in & with the D, is easily destroyed, the matter hath worse successe, if she be then also impeded

22 Take signification of Kings and Princes from the ☉, and from the Planet existing in the tenth house; such as assist Kings or Princes must have signification in the eleventh house; the friends or assistance of the Laitie required from the second house.

23 The first setting forth of a King or Prince to undertake a Journey, is generally misliked when the Signe of Mars ascends. Without doubt (bipedum nequissimus) the haughty Scribe Noworth is the sharpest man in the world to direct a Journey or Martch, Teste seipso apud Oxford, Maij 7. 1645.

24 The Signes of ♊ and ♎ doe obey the head and tail of the Dragon more then other Signes, and therefore they be in those Signes more greater evils then in any other Signes.

25 In Womens Nativities, when the Signe ascending in any of the houses of ♀, and ♂ shall be posited therein, the Woman will be immodest, she will be the same if ♄ ascend 26 The ☉ receiveth the vertues of other Planets, when he is either joyned with them in the ascendant or mid-heaven; the D performes the same in a nocturnall Geniture, when being in the foresaid places, she is joyned with the Planets.

37 ♃ represseth the malice of ♄, even so doth ♀ the evil influence of ♂.

28 When a Question is demanded for a Woman, simply receive signification from ♀, but determinately from the seventh house; if for an enemy, absolutely from the twelfth house, but determinately from the seventh.

Beneficiall Aphorismes.

29 In the setting out of any to fight, especially of Kings, the ascendant be one of the houses of the superiour Planets, of the ☉, and let the ☉ as well as the Lord of the ascendant be potent; but the Lord of the seventh weak, and afflicted of the infortunate Planets. Oh pittifull George What-chou didst not understand this Aphorism 1645.

30 When the ♃ is joyned unto ♀ or ♄, encreased in light number, generally then she inclines well in all things; but be diminished, she signifies ill in all things: understand fully the contrary when she is joyned to ♂ or ♁.

A Planet is said to be encreased in light, when the ☉ recedes from him, or he from the ☉; he is diminished when he hastens to the ☉, or the ☉ to him: A Planet is said to be encreased in number, when the æquation of his argument is added to his mean motion: but diminished, when the same æquation is taken away from his mean motion.

31 In things laid to pawne or borrowed, be carefull that be not under the Sun beames, or impeded of the Infortunes; for if he chance to be so, and not received of the Planets, impeding, there will be small or no hopes of restoring or redeeming it againe.

32 The benevolent Planets hastening to the configuration of the malevolents, be the figure how it will, they diminish part of their malice; but if the figure be good, they performe the more good; if ill, then lesse: But the Infortunes approaching to the configuration of the Infortunes, by their ☐ or ♂ aspect, they diminish some of their good influence; but if the configuration be of the other aspect, viz. * or △, they harme nothing.

Beneficall Aphorismes.

33 When \hbar removes out of one Signe into another there usually appeares fiery meteors, or other certaine Signes in the Elements, of the nature of Fires.

34 The temperatenesse of the ayre happens from the ☿ and ☉, especially when they meet in aery Signes: from the ☿ of \hbar ☉ and ♀ in double bodyed Signes, and in the Spring time, there proceeds darknesse of the ayre; and usually after such conjunctions, many Infirmities follow.

35 In the activall season of the yeer, when the ☉ enters the Termes of ♀, then heat succeeds; in the Winter season drynesse and small store of rain followes.

36 Both in the Nativities and Questions of men, make Hyleg and Alcocodon, and direct them, especially in Questions concerning Kings and Princes, for by them their affections are discovered, whether they be good or evill. What Hyleg and Alcocodon are, see our Introduction pag. 527, and 530.

37 When the Signe ascending, or ascendant it self is free from misfortune, and the Lord thereof unfortunate, verily it declares the health of body, but a sorrowfull and heavy mind; if they happen contrary, then judge the contrary. This is a generall rule, That the ascendant signifies the state of the body, the Lord thereof the accidents of the mind.

38 Consider the configuration of the Planets not according to their distance by Signs, but by their rayes or orbs. Here is much controversie about the sence of this Aphorism, whether to take the aspects of the Stars in the Zodiack, or in the Æquinoctiall.
